a note from Jean

Dear Teachers,

Okay, I'll admit it—I can't get enough of Shark Tank. I enjoy watching the entrepreneurs make their best pitches as the sharks wheel and deal for a larger, less expensive stake. But I've also wondered: What's the secret sauce? What is it about some entrepreneurs and businesses that grab the sharks' attention while others fall flat? This month, the sharks themselves tell us. We've gathered their best tips for your students, who could be future business owners. I hope the tips lead to fun conversations in the classroom. If you're inspired to host a homegrown version of the show (perhaps with local business owners as judges), please document it and send us the results.

All the best,
Jean

Teaching the cover story

THE SCOOP FROM FROM THE SHARKS

SUMMARY

Judges from ABC's hit show Shark Tank share their business expertise.

TEACHING TIPS

Before Reading

Check Prior Knowledge

- Ask: What do you know about the TV show Shark Tank? What is its premise? (Entrepreneurs present their business ideas to judges called "sharks." These judges, who are successful businesspeople, decide if the idea is worth their time and investment.)

Build Comprehension

Summarize

- Have pairs of students read the story. Ask them to summarize in two sentences each shark's advice. Then discuss which tips they found most useful, and why.

Identify Problem/Solution

- Focus on Barbara Corcoran, Kevin O'Leary, and Robert Herjavec. Ask: What challenge did he or she face? How did he or she overcome it? Do successful entrepreneurs need to be able to overcome challenges? Explain.

Extend Learning

Analyze a Pitch

- Tell students that they are going to analyze a Shark Tank pitch made by two high school students for a no-drip ice cream cone. Go to abc.go.com/shows/shark-tank/episode-guide. Choose Season 7, episode 25. Click the "clips" button on the right. After viewing, ask: What problem did the invention solve? Did the boys' use of props strengthen the pitch? Explain. What part of the pitch did you find most persuasive? Why?

You Be the Judge

- Have groups of students come up with their own ideas for product improvement. Have each group write a pitch describing the improvement and why it's needed. After each group presents its pitch, ask the class: Is this a product worth investing in? Why or why not?

Make Real-World Connections

- Invite business owners from the community to speak to your class about how they got started, the challenges they faced, and how they overcame these challenges. You might also ask them to share their advice for young people who would like to start businesses. Before the visit, have students brainstorm a list of questions about entrepreneurship.

Use these tips to support close reading of page 4.

Tell them to write one of the following character traits on each: creative, determined, observant. Have students place each Post-it next to the young entrepreneur on page 4 who most displays the trait on the note. Discuss students' choices. Remind them to support their ideas using evidence from the text. Ask: What other traits would benefit budding entrepreneurs? Why?

Before Reading Preview Key Concepts

- Ask: What is an entrepreneur? (A person who starts a business) What might motivate someone to become an entrepreneur?

Build Comprehension Problem/Solution

- Tell students that new products and businesses are often inspired by problems that need solving. To demonstrate this idea, have students complete the worksheet "Problem Solved!" as they read about how the young entrepreneurs on page 4 got their start in business.

Character Traits

- Provide each student with three Post-it notes.

Extend Learning Design an Ad

- Assign each group a business from page 4: Screenmend, Mo's Bows, or Ry's Ruffery. The group should use the answers to these questions to create an appealing ad: What makes the product unique or desirable? Who are the customers? What is the best way to reach them?

School / Home CONNECTION

Share these tips with your students' families.

- Have students watch an episode of Shark Tank with a parent. The show airs Fridays at 9 p.m. ET on ABC. Families can also watch archived episodes online at abc.go.com/shows/shark-tank. Suggest they discuss the following for each pitch viewed: Would you have invested in the product or business? Why or why not? What made the pitch a success or failure? Could the pitch have been improved? How so?
- Encourage students to share with a family member the advice they find most useful from pages 2 and 3 of the magazine. Does the family member agree with the advice? Why or why not?
- Have students review with a parent the kid-created businesses highlighted on page 4 of the magazine. Then have them make a list of the pros and cons of entrepreneurship. Is entrepreneurship worth the potential risks and rewards?
